Period for Reply

A SHORTENED STATUTORY PERIOD FOR REPLY IS SET TO EXPIRE 3 MONTH(S) OR THIRTY (30) DAYS, WHICHEVER IS LONGER, FROM THE MAILING DATE OF THIS COMMUNICATION.

- Extensions of time may be available under the provisions of 37 CFR 1.136(a). In no event, however, may a reply be timely filed after SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- If NO period for reply is specified above, the maximum statutory period will apply and will expire SIX (6) MONTHS from the mailing date of this communication.
- Failure to reply within the set or extended period for reply will, by statute, cause the application to become ABANDONED (35 U.S.C. § 133). Any reply received by the Office later than three months after the mailing date of this communication, even if timely filed, may reduce any earned patent term adjustment. See 37 CFR 1.704(b).

Status

- 1) ☒ Responsive to communication(s) filed on 19 January 2011.
- 2a) ☐ This action is FINAL.                      2b) ☒ This action is non-final.

Detailed Action

In response to the amendment filed on 01/19/2011, claims 1-8 are pending. This action is made Non-Final.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 1-6 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kato (US 5,808,224) in view of Song (US 6,267,600).

Regarding claims 1, 5 and 6, Kato discloses a portable downloader and player comprising a demodulator for demodulating the signal applied thereto from the electromagnetic signal (See Abstract and P.7, 5-22, Col.12, 5-28); a waveform shaping unit (e.g. modulator)(See fig.2, element 36); a receiver connected to an external computing device having a computing function and a sound processing function, the receiver controlling the internal operation of the karaoke data signal receiving pack while transmitting the digital voice signal and key data signal (See Col.7, 35-50); an optical disk for storing a karaoke system operating program executed and read by the external computing device, song data and background image data(See Col.1, 54-Col.2, 2 and Col.12, 5-28) and a serial communication interface (e.g. packet circuit ) (See figure 2, element 35). Kato does not specifically disclose a RF receiver for receiving voice signal and key data signal, an A/D converter for converting the voice signal into the digital signal and a separator for separating audio/key data. However, Song discloses a microphone and a receiver which outputs mixed audio and/or song signal to a television receiver set, wherein the receiver comprises an RF receiver and an audio/key separator (See Col.7, 15-25 and Col.9, 6-15). Song further discloses an analogue to digital converter for converting analogue signals to digital signal(See figure 2, element 151). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify Kato's invention in view of the teachings of Song in order to be able to take advantage of technology to use a wireless microphone for increased mobility.

With respect to claim 2, Song further discloses wherein serial communication interface transmits or receives signals in a wireless manner (See Col.4, 10-30).

Regarding claim 3 and 4, Kato further discloses wherein the external computing device comprises a game apparatus or a personal computer (See Col. 1, 20-32).

Claims 7 and 8 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kato (US 5,808,224) in view of Song (US 6,267,600) as applied to claims 1 and 6 above and further in view of Kuramochi (US 7,328,272).

Regarding claims 7 and 8, Kato discloses optical disks as storage medium (See Col 1, 54-Col.2, 2). Kato /Song do not specifically disclose a DVD-ROM and a USB interface. However, Kuramochi discloses USB interface and DVD-ROM (See Col.9, 23-35 and 53-64). Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to modify Kato/Song's invention to incorporate the features of Kuramochi's invention in order to take advantage of an existing technology to improve storage and communication of video and/or audio signals.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments with respect to claim rejections under 35 U.S.C 103(a) have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion
